RED PLUME GALLOWAYS
FRAME ALMOST DOWN

The Red Plume headframe erected by the Tonopah Mining company in 1906, is almost dismantled and by tomorrow night the base timbers will be removed with the remaining fragments of the structure to its new station on the Divide, where it will be re-erected on the Belcher estate. The headframe was erected on base timbers measuring 24x24 inches and the whole business is of the finest Oregon pine which does not show the slightest evidence of rot. A feature of the erecting work is the presence of a gin pole of great size measuring eighteen inches at the base. The last timbers will be delivered at the Belcher late tomorrow and two weeks will be required in raising the timbers into position.

BIG ORDER FOR HOISTS
PLACED WITH DENVER FIRM

E. C. Rawson, representing the Dillon Box Iron Works of Denver, is enthusiastic over the way the various Divide mining companies do business. Yesterday he received an order from the MacNamara Crescent for a 150-horsepower hoist and 100-horsepower hoist for the Tonopah Oriental, the company organized by J. I. Joseph to take over the ground formerly held by the New York Tonopah Mining company. He also looked an order for the complete equipment of the Horseshoe Divide. The MacNamara orders call for delivery as quickly as possible, with cash in advance if necessary to hurry the work.

STOUT CANNOT REFRAIN
EXPRESSING HIS SURPRISE

Charles Stout, a pioneer of Tonopah in 1902, and a prominent business man of Reno, is spending a few days in Tonopah viewing the wonders of the Divide development. Mr. Stout has purchased large blocks of stock and is interested in 28 Divide mining companies. In conversing today he remarked that he never would have believed the time would come when he would be able to leave Reno and reach another city with greater population in the state of Nevada.
